Our Story...

In an abandoned general store built in 1891, Rory Feek's wife, Joey, and his sister Marcy opened the original Marcy Jo's Mealhouse in 2007, to serve the unincorporated farming community of Pottsville, Tennessee. After only offering breakfast and desserts to a few local customers in the early days, the Mealhouse is now a destination that travelers from all over the world have come to to experience the full menu and be part of the incredible story that has unfolded in the past years. As famous for their cinnamon rolls as they are for being part of Joey and Rory's tv shows, videos and community, their recipes have been featured on countless cooking shows and sampled by celebrities such as Randy Travis, George Jones, Heidi Klum, and countless others. Although Joey passed away in 2016, Marcy still manages and runs the original restaurant, and her son Mikel runs the nearby bakery where all the breads and desserts are made from scratch daily.

Carrying on that tradition, Rory and his youngest sister Candy opened Marcy Jo's Muletown in the fall of 2019. The new eatery, just off the beautiful town square in Columbia, Tennessee, seats nearly a hundred, adds some new healthy options to some of the customer favorites, and features an intimate stage for showcasing the area's greatest songwriters and storytellers.

Now owning and running sister restaurants, sisters Marcy and Candy know first hand how a homemade meal and a smile truly can "change lives... one bite at a time".
